Welcome to Greenport

This is not your typical stylized, re-done nautical town. GREENPORT IS THE REAL THING.

Since before the Revolutionary War, Greenport's deep water harbor has been the center of village activity. In the 1700s, village wharves saw crews unload cargoes of rum and molasses from the West Indies. Commercial shipping may have found its way to other destinations, but in many ways Greenport's relationship to the water has changed little.

As much as two-thirds of the village population is said to earn a living directly from boats and related industries — such activities as commercial and sport fishing, shipbuilding and repairs, marine supplies, yacht sales, dock building, etc.

Most everything in Greenport revolves around the waterfront. Supermarkets, marine hardware stores, fishing supplies, laundromat, pharmacy and banks are all within a five-minute walk of most village docks.

And that's not all. Greenport is unmatched on eastern Long Island in its range of places to eat and drink. Over a dozen restaurants are within walking distance of the village's center. You'll find fare to satisfy the most land-bound palate as well as fresh, safe seafood in an amazing variety of dishes.

Food isn't the only thing on Greenport's menu for visitors. Entertainment ranges from family-style miniature golf to several clubs which offer live music all summer. In the center of town is a thousand-seat art deco movie theater. And on Friday nights, you can enjoy an old-fashioned outdoor band concert, followed by people-watching and window-shopping.

Finally, there's the shopping. Greenport offers everything from the necessary to the frivolous, in quaint shops you'll want to take your time to explore. From hardware to sportswear and bike rentals to boutiques, from nautical artwork to the newest novel, you'll find what you're looking for in Greenport.
