Dear Bill,

The following is a discription of what happened on the evening of 17 September, 1993, while a Mr. Brinckerhoff and members of his crew were dining at our facilities.

While dining, Mr. Brinckerhoff apparently sought to entertain himself, his table mates and the other guests in the dining room by being overly loud, by throwing food at the entertainer, by throwing food at the ceiling, and by rearranging the plant settings on the tables of guests sitting around him. As if this were'nt enough, Mr. Brinckerhoff thought it amusing to tell the waitresses serving his table that he found their bunnis to be cute; while holding up a dinner roll. Not to stop the humiliation there, other members of his table, including himself, started to spit watermelon seeds at the waitresses.

In years past we've had to contend with his intoxicating himself into a drunken stupor, after which his shipmates would have to carry him off to his boat. The members of this club, the waitstaff and I will no longer tolerate his drunkenness, his lascivious remarks nor his crude behavior. His actions are not acceptable at this club.

Bill, if there is anything that Offsoundings can do to help correct this situation, it would be very much appreciated. If you need any other information, please call me at any time. I would like to add that I found everything else went exceptionally smooth this year, and that I look forward to seeing you next season.

By Direction,

Jeff Goubeaud, G.M.
